TIME	ARABIC	HOW IT SOUNDS	ENGLISH
0:07	السلام عليكم يا أخ يوسف	Es-salamu 'alaikum, ya akh Youssef.	Peace be upon you, brother Youssef.
0:14	أنا مصري قبطي	Ana Masri 'Ebti.	I'm an Egyptian Copt.
0:18	وبتكلم شوية عربي لغاية النهاردة	W-batkallem shwayyet 'Arabi le-ghayet en-naharda.	And I still speak a little Arabic to this day.
0:26	للأسف مع الوقت أنا نسيت شوية من اللغة العربية اللي كبرت واتربيت عليها	Lel-asaf, ma'a el-wa't ana neseet shwayya men el-logha el-'Arabeyya elli kebert w-etrabbeit 'aleiha.	Unfortunately, over time I've forgotten some of the Arabic I grew up with and was raised on.
0:41	يشرفني أن أشتغل معاك وأن أقوم بدور الإمام	Yesharrafni an ashtaghal ma'ak wa an a'oom be-dawr el-imam.	It would be an honor for me to work with you and to take on the role of the imam.
0:52	أو أن أشتغل معاك وأن ألعب دور الإمام	Aw an ashtaghal ma'ak wa an al'ab dawr el-imam.	Or rather, to work with you and play the role of the imam.
1:02	علشان كده عايز أكون صريح وصادق معاك من الأول	'Alashan keda 'ayez akoon sareeh w-sade' ma'ak men el-awwel.	That's why I want to be frank and honest with you from the start.
1:15	أو، [إن شئت؟] من البداية	Aw, [en shi't?] men el-bedaya.	Or, [if you like,] from the very beginning. UNCERTAIN

Pronunciation key: an apostrophe before a vowel is a catch in the throat (Arabic ع, or the Egyptian way of saying ق); kh as in Scottish "loch"; gh like a French "r"; doubled letters are held longer.

"Masri 'Ebti": Egyptians usually say ق as a catch in the throat, so qibti (Copt) is heard as 'ebti. It means Coptic, i.e. an Egyptian Christian.

Last line: "from the beginning" came out the same on every pass; the words before it did not. Probably a filler such as "or, if you like". Please check by ear.
